Some time will probably be required, even with such ingenious experimenters as Hales and Deslandres are, before we have daily maps or the resplendent, mysterious-looking agglomeration of matter which surrounds our bright star, and awakes the admiration of the astronomer who catches a glimpse of it during an eclipse. In the mean time we mdst be satisfied with the little we have learned about the corona from the last eclipses, since due attention began to be paid to it. It must, however, be owned that this little is already beset with difficulties. We certainly possess several quite reliable drawings and some excellent photographs of the glory; but we find that, for some reason unknown, its aspects totally change from one eclipse to the next. In 1860 it was nearly globular; in 1868, immense rays almost...
