Not illustrated. 1905 Excerpt: . . . there is little incentive to start new enterprises in this field. The market for fibrous talc is limited almost entirely to the requirements of paper manufacturing, and since it scarcely seems probable that the other uses can be augmented to any great extent, the demand, doubtless, will continue to be governed by the conditions prevailing in that industry. So far as the American paper trade is concerned, St Lawrence talc has become a staple article, but there is still some room for extending the foreign consumption, particularly in Great Britain where manufacturers have been slow to recognize its advantages over other fillers. Germany is the best of foreign markets and large quantities of the product are exported annually to that country. That it can compete successfully with the high grade German clays sold at lower prices lends encouragement to the view that the exports may be...
