James H. Bilbray (chairman of the subcommittee) presiding. Chairman Bilbray. If the witnesses will come forward, we are going to start. The other Members will traipse in. We have a whole series of votes we expect in the future, so we will probably be interrupting your testimony, constantly having to go over and vote, but hopefully we can have most of it in before we are gone for any prolonged period of time. So if the witnesses would come forward that are present. Today the subcommittee continues its series of hearings on unfair competition from Government and Government-supported entities. As stated in our first hearing on June 16, the subcommittee enters these hearings with an open mind, but aware of a number of concerns that have been raised by the small business community in a number of areas in which the Government has begun to compete with the private sector. The Government is faced with an ever-increasing dilemma. More and more, the Congress is calling upon Federal agencies to be ever more fiscally stringent and self-sufficient. The answer to this mandate is often to take the Government know-how and ability and enter the commercial market. This now puts us on the tip of a double-edged sword. How do you prevent Government activities from hurting the private sector...
